Built in the mid eighteenth century by The Marquis de L'Aigle replacing a former 17th Century Chateau and standing on the original site of an eleventh century monastery stands the six storey 'Chateau Du Francport'.

Famed for its superb hunting, it became a regular favourite of Napoleon III who used the Chateau as his 'Hunting Lodge'.

Situated just 800 metres from the location of the signing of 'The Armistice' in 1918 and once again in 1940 with the fall of France, it is considered a national monument.
